Intended learning outcomes

As a result of attending and passing the course a student will be able to

• Write well-structured modular programs in Python

• Write programs that fulfil community standards

• Use test-driven development principles for programming.

• Use modern version control for program development in teams.

• Use external libraries in their programs.

• Work with files: read, write and analyze data

• Analyze programs by debugging, profiling and optimization.

Course contents

• Basic syntax in Python, data structures and program flow.

• Structuring of programs with functions and modules

• Version control with git

• Object-oriented programming with classes

• Methods of testing for Python development

• Python libraries for computation and plotting

• Advanced structures and concepts in Python.

Course literature

* Lecture slides and lab material.

* A list of optional recommended literature is given at the start of the course.

Examination

• TEN1 - Written Exam, 3.0 credits, grading scale: A, B, C, D, E, FX, F

• LAB1 - Laboratory Work, 4.5 credits, grading scale: P, F

Based on recommendation from KTH's coordinator for disabilities, the examiner will decide how to adapt an examination for students with documented disability.

The examiner may apply another examination format when re-examining individual students.

If the course is discontinued, students may request to be examined during the following two academic years.

Other requirements for final grade

Passed Computer labs and Written examination

Ethical approach

- All members of a group are responsible for the group's work.
- In any assessment, every student shall honestly disclose any help received and sources used.
- In an oral assessment, every student shall be able to present and answer questions about the entire assignment and solution.
